Optional items -- Municipalities wishing to conduct a credit, driving and/or criminal history check must evaluate the business need for these checks. Offers of employment should be made contingent on the successful results of the background check. Note: a background or check may fail under the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) as a "consumer reports" if performed by a THIRD PARTY. Employers may use these consumer reports when hiring new employees and when evaluating employees for promotion, reassignment, and retention -- as long as FCRA's procedures are followed. Sections 604, 606, and 615 of the FCRA spell out employer responsibilities when using consumer reports for employment purposes. In any case where information in a consumer reports in a factor in not hiring an applicant -- even if the report information is not a major consideration -- the employer must follow the procedures mandated by the FCRA. See "Tools" for further guidance on FCRA's requirements. IMPORTANT NOTE: Background checks which are considered "investigative consumer reports" are subject to additional procedural requirements. The employer has an obligation to make available information regarding the nature and scope of the investigation requested. In addition to FCRA's requirements, other legal requirements and considerations exist for all three checks. See the article in "Background Checks" in the HR Toolkit for a brief discussion of this subject matter.
