

Are you ready to RECYCLE?! What better time to recycle and reduce waste than at your Super Bowl party. Recycle aluminum and steel (tin) cans, glass bottles and jars, and plastic bottles, containers, and shopping bags. Reduce waste by using durable tableware: plates, bowls, cups, utensils, napkins and tablecloths. For more recycling information, visit RecycleSpot.org.

Show your love this Valentine's Day by not giving them stuff. Instead, give an experience, or just your time and creativity. For some great ideas, visit New Dream.

When the Super Bowl or Oscars party is over, what to do with all those pizza boxes? The clean part (usually the top) can be recycled. The soiled part (usually the bottom) should go in the trash or be composted. For more recycling information, visit RecycleSpot.org.

Yes, they're paper, but no, they are not recyclable. Why? Because they have a thin layer of plastic on them, and are often heavily contaminated with food and beverages. The only exception are cartons – milk, juice, soup – which are 100-percent recyclable in your curbside bin or at your recycling center. For more recycling information, visit RecycleSpot.org.
