

MAIDEN VOYAGE

KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER XVIII—Continued

"Clifford Taft—Oh, I am glad! Tony excused, getting up to kiss him. Tony would pick a girl with money. "She hasn't got so much money." Cliff smiled at himself in the glass. Life was going well with him, with all the Tafts. "We're sitting pretty," she and Bruce had a quiet dinner and he went early to bed. Tony thought that she would put out the lamps and sit and look out at the moon and at Mrs. Heavis and moonshine, and wait for Aunt Meg to come home.

The bell rang sharply; the hall bell. Tony went to the door and it was Larry Bellamy who stood there.

"Tony!" he said. "I want to see you. May I come in?"

"Come in," she said, her heart rising in a great bound of joy and hope. Larry hung aside his cap and coat and sat down, drawing his chair close to hers as he did so, catching both her hands in his big cold ones.

"Tony, what's all this about? I'm just in. Ruth and I flew up by airplane this afternoon. Down at the office they're all upset over this. Greeny was tearing his hair. What happened? My dear, my dear, you can't run out on us like that!"

It was heaven, after these endless lonely days, to have him here beside her, warm and brown and eager and affectionate, to realize that she had made her mark as a newspaper woman after all.

He listened to the whole story attentively as she poured it out, taking it step by step.

"Larry, was that fair? Was that decent? To let me drag Miss Wallister into it, poor thing—she was fighting every step of the way—and then to tell me that I'd made her betray her boss?"

"No," he said, "I'm sorry, Larry said briefly, as she paused.

"And then that smug pig of a Pritchard? Tony stormed bitterly. "How dare he—how dare he involve me in his dirty tricks!"

"I agree with you," said Larry. "But you can't give up your job on his account. That'd be a disaster—much too much. Tony, don't be a fool about this," Larry pleaded.

"It's my honor, Larry!" she said, with trembling lips and eyes fixed on her. "I've never seen you like this, Tony," Larry said again, resigned. "He was standing at the window beside her, and as she raised her head, brooding eyes met his.

corals in her ears and about her throat. She was younger than Ruth, not more than thirty, handsome and dark and striking with coral lips and black shining hair and an ivory skin.

"Oh, just ourselves," Tony said smilingly, as she was introduced. "I thought it was a party!"

"It was going to be," Ruth said, raising her face for Tony's kiss. "But now it's just Caroline and Joe and you and me."

"Joe?" Tony echoed, pleased. "My brother, you know," Caroline Pohlenius said.

"He's showing Caroline Del Monte to town."

"Ah, you'll love it. I'm going down Sunday to see my sister and the baby, and for Joe's housewarming, of course."

"We'll see you, then. You couldn't dine with us at the hotel on Sunday night?"

"Ruth, come if you can. I don't know just how I'll find things at Benny's. She has no nurse, and she may have made a plan—"

It didn't sound extremely convincing, and Tony had an idea that Caroline Pohlenius was looking right through her. But Ruth only said unsuspiciously:

"Well, come if you can."

"This is extraordinary weather for San Francisco," Tony told the Eastern woman.

"This wouldn't be warm in a New York June."

"I hear my perfectly good husband called on you the night we got back from Los Angeles last week," said Ruth, smiling at the old woman.

"Not last week, the week before," Tony smiled at the long cold glass of food tea in her hand, resigned from her job in a tannery, she explained, and Larry came and cleared it up."

"She certainly is beautiful," Caroline Pohlenius thought. "I wonder if she's always so nervous. She was as pale as a ghost when she came in, and now she's got high color. Blue eyes, dark hair, a fine nose, a full mouth, the shape of the face, and the big mouth and big teeth—either beautiful or homely, I would say, and certainly beautiful this afternoon."

"No," he said, "I'm sorry," she explained, and Larry came and cleared it up."

"What's the rush, Tony?"

"No rush. But I've been here half an hour, and I'm supposedly doing the duty of the town exhibition."

"Is it any good, Tony? Oh, sit down again, nothing will be going on there until half-past five, and it's just five now."

"They say it's good," Tony took her chair again; a slender figure in a white suit, with a white hat and white shoes. The door clicked and again her breath rose enthusiastically against her heart. It was old Mrs. Patterson. No escape for another ten minutes now.

Mrs. Patterson took Tony's chair, and Tony sat on a straw basket, panting a little, and said, "This is country weather."

"We're showing Caroline Del Monte to town."

"Ah, you'll love it. I'm going down Sunday to see my sister and the baby, and for Joe's housewarming, of course."

"No, I don't think it would be a lovely trip for you," the older woman protested mildly.

"Ah-h-h!" Ruth said, "Here's Larry!" He came in, looking rather pale and tired, and Tony had an idea that Caroline Pohlenius was looking right through her. But Ruth only said unsuspiciously:

"Well, come if you can."

alone, had passed without a glimpse of him. Tony had been feverish, despondent, broken by turns. She had planned letters that should go to him, written them, torn them up. She had dreamed, had taken herself violently from dreams, had sat at her desk in the city room staring, staring into space, not knowing what she felt or what she saw. There was but one object of all her thoughts—Larry, Larry, Larry.

On the day of the luncheon she went down to the city office looking her best and with her blue eyes bright and clear. She and Larry had made no engagement to meet; supposedly it would be there. Tony settled down to her daily routine, wondering just how and when she would hear from Larry; she worked away busily. It was twenty minutes to one; it was one o'clock, and still no word and no word. She called him up on the telephone.

"Larry, this is Tony."

"A pause. Then he said quickly, brightly:

"Coming right down."

For some reason she felt ashamed of herself, chilled. But there was little time to think. He did come down, entered the almost empty city room, stood looking gravely down at her.

"Come along."

They went out together, and Tony was waiting in the garage in Montgomery street and they got in the car together. Almost without speech they drove through the park and to a restaurant on the shore.

"This is a lovely place," Tony said, almost timidly. For something in his manner was new, was a little more open, and Pritchard hadn't been out at all."

"You mean you two haven't seen each other since the night we got back from Los Angeles last week," said Ruth, smiling at the old woman.

"Not last week, the week before," Tony smiled at the long cold glass of food tea in her hand, resigned from her job in a tannery, she explained, and Larry came and cleared it up."

Pretty Wall Hanging of Colorful Peacocks

PATTERN 1014

How rarely one sees a peacock with all his lovely plumage displayed! This proud pair of colorful birds will hold this unique pose as long as your wall panel lasts. You'll want it done in a short time, of course, and it will be, for the actual embroidery goes very quickly, using only single, running and outline stitches. You may use either silk, wool or cotton floss, but remember—the more colorful it is, the prettier!

Pattern 1014 comes to you with a transfer pattern of a picture 15 by 20 inches; a color chart and key; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches needed. Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coin preferred) to The Sewing Circle, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Ave., New York, N. Y.

Black-Draught Good Laxative

Black-Draught has been kept on hand for all the family in the home of Mr. W. A. Lemons, of Independence, Mo., since the early years ago. Mr. Lemons writes that he takes it as a laxative in cases of "headache, dull, tired feeling, biliousness."

Black-Draught is a "gentle, comfortable" as a laxative. It is especially useful in cases of "headache, dull, tired feeling, biliousness."

THE DISGUSTINGLY RICH

Benny made some sketches and sent them in and got a Patent and built a small motor and began producing at once great after that, unless the Poor Rummy happens to be in the back part of the House at the time.

Certain it is that if you will grab and scribble about any Great Executive seated at a Mahogany Desk, you find on his Person the lingering Evidence of Stone-Bruses, Callouses, Knifecuts, Dog Bites of fingers and immediate contact with a Strap having a Buckle at one end. Cheaper Feed for More Profit

Home-Grown Grains Can Increase Farmer's Margin.

More than one farmer is making the most of the improved prices for dairy products by adopting economical feeding methods. Savings made through more economical feeding are only one of the many ways in which farmers who are members of dairy herd improvement associations are finding that they can increase their returns.

Substitution of home-grown grains for more expensive protein feeds, together with replacement of part of the corn by oats are two ways by which dairymen are finding it possible to cut feed costs without lowering their herd production averages. One farmer increased his monthly net income from 17 cows by $10.88 with a less expensive ration.

Another increased his net income $11.55 a month through the same kind of a ration change.

A third dairymen used a ration composed of corn, oats and distiller's grain instead of corn and a high protein supplement previously used and was able to cut feed costs by nine cents a hundred pounds, although the protein content was the same. The cheaper ration reduced the feed cost of butterfat by five cents a pound and the feed cost of milk by 14 cents a hundred pounds.

Kidneys Must Clean Out Acids

The only way your body can clean out acids and poisonous wastes from your blood is thru 8 million tiny, delicate kidney tubes or filters, but beware of cheap, drastic, irritating drugs. If functional kidney or bladder disorders make you suffer from Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Leg Pains, Backache, Cries Under Eyes, Dizziness, Rheumatic Pains, Acidity, Burning, Smarting or Itching, don't take chances. Get the Doctor's guaranteed prescription called Cystex (Sis-Tex). Works fast, safe and sure. In 48 hours it must bring new vitality, and is guaranteed to fix you up in one week or money back on return of empty package. Cystex costs only 9c a day at druggists and the guarantee protects you.

TIRED, WORN OUT, NO AMBITION

How many women are just dragging themselves around, all tired out with periodic weakness and pain? They should know that Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets relieve periodic pains and discomfort. Small size only 25 cents. Mrs. Dorsie Williams of Danville, Illinois, says, "I had no ambition and was terribly nervous. Your Tablets helped my periods and built me up." Try them next month.

COULD NOT DO HER HOUSEWORK

When everything you attempt is a burden—when you are nervous and irritable—at your wit's end—try this medicine. It may be just what you need for extra energy. Mrs. Charles L. Cadmus of Trenton, New Jersey, says, "After doing just a little work I had to lie down. My mother-in-law recommended the Vegetable Compound. I can see a wonderful change now."
