Description

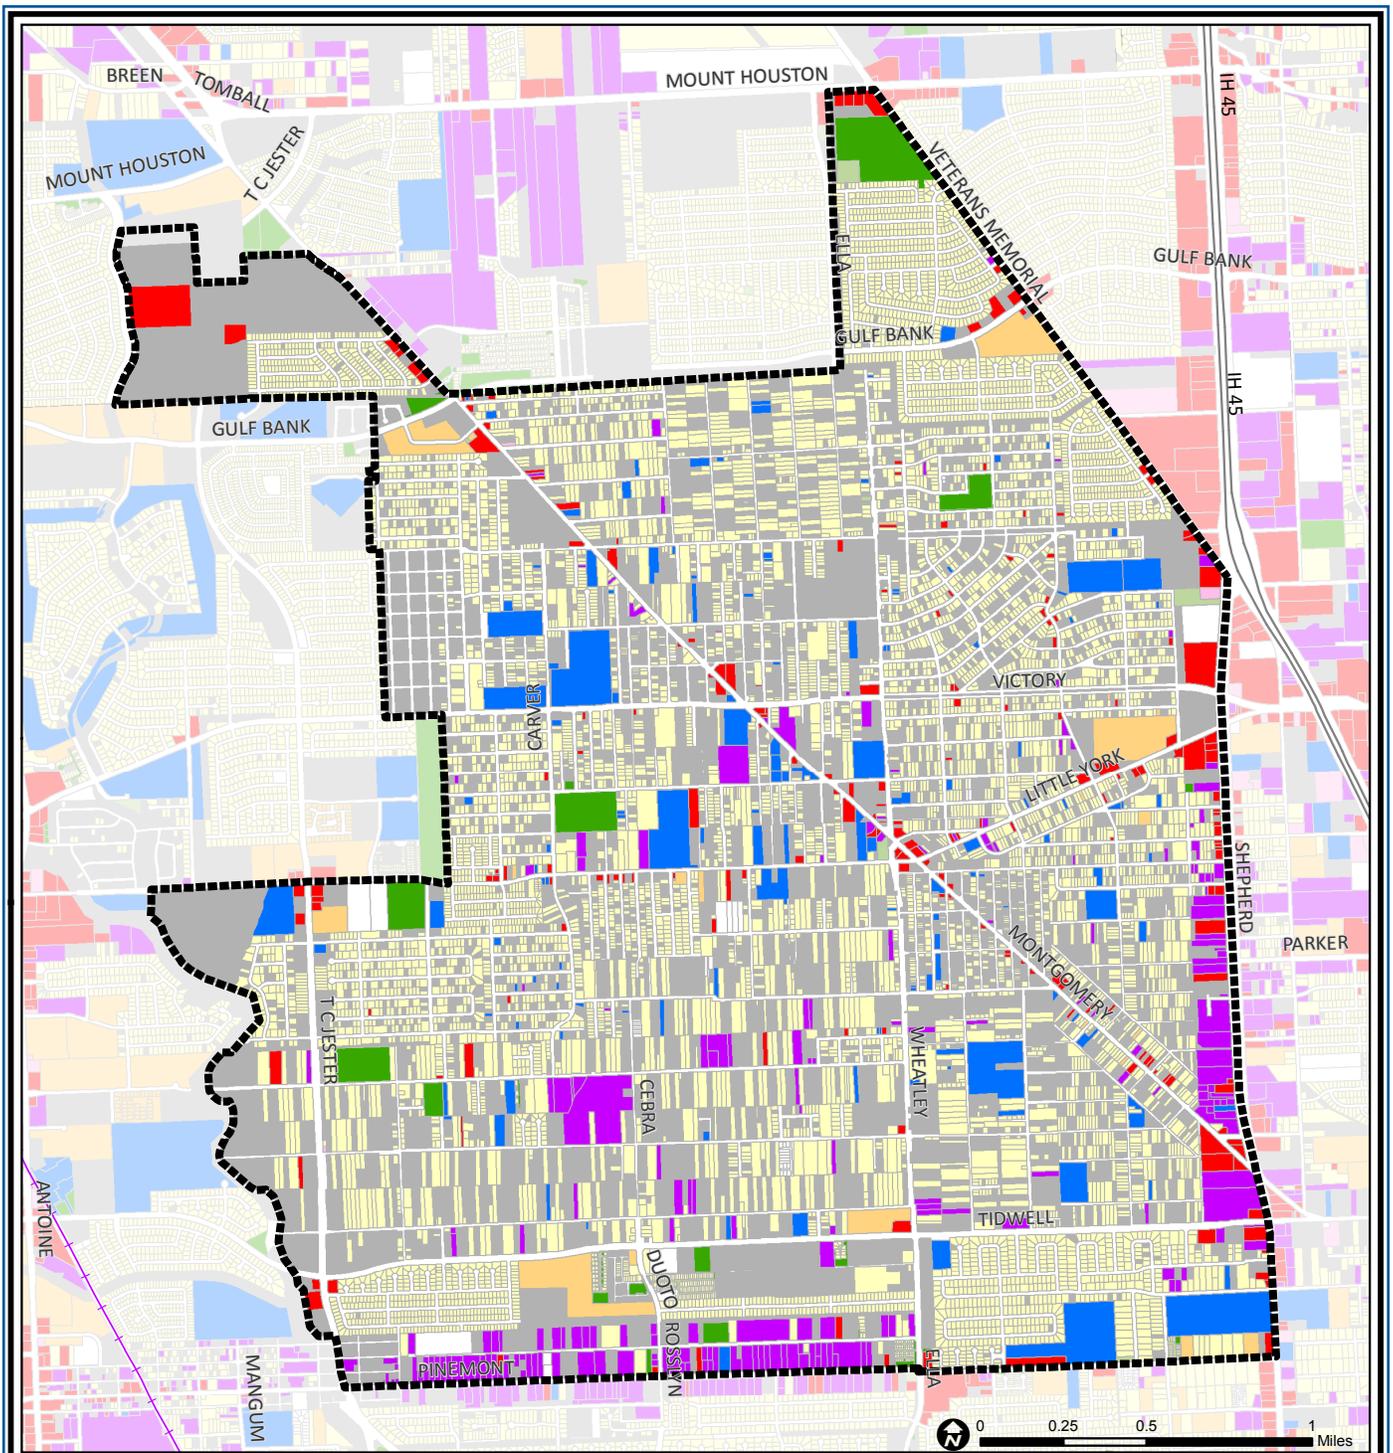

Acres Homes, a wooded area northwest of the city, was originally subdivided into large lots and marketed to African-Americans. Still primarily African-American, the community now includes a combination of large areas of pine forests with only a scattering of homes: small tract homes built in standard suburban subdivisions, and large comfortable homes on well-maintained wooded lots. There is little commercial or industrial development. The eastern part of the community is located in the Houston Independent School District (ISD), the western part is in the Aldine ISD. Water and sewer service was introduced into the original subdivisions during the 1970s as the area was annexed by the City of Houston.
