National Events Spur Questions About Local Police Procedures

The death of George Floyd during an arrest by Minneapolis police officers and the subsequent outrage across the nation has brought attention to law enforcement everywhere.

Northglenn Police Department (NPD) is already taking steps to address concerns of our community.

How Has NPD Responded to Current Events?

Northglenn has long valued community-based policing and transparency. In January 2020, the Police Department initiated an assessment process with an independent consulting group, Berry, Dunn, McNeil and Parker, LLC (BerryDunn) to conduct a 360 assessment evaluating the department's staffing and operations. On June 8, in response to recent events, Chief Jim May presented to City Council about current hiring, training and use of force practices; web pages were updated to answer incoming questions (www.northglenn.org/PoliceFAQs); and there was a telephone town hall open to all to answer questions on June 17. In addition, Chief May and BerryDunn released statements acknowledging community concerns and expressing that NPD was already working hard to address them. Next, a full report on the recently completed 360 assessment will be finished and released publicly July 10 with an online form for resident questions; Chief May and BerryDunn will present the report findings to council on July 22; and another telephone town hall focused on the assessment and next steps is July 29.

"We are your department. We are here to serve you in the best manner possible, and that means listening to our community."

What is a "360 Assessment"?

Officially titled "Staffing and Operations Assessment," this project is referred to as a 360 assessment because it takes a look at the department from numerous angles (a full circle, 360 degrees). BerryDunn was selected through a Request for Proposal process in November 2019 to examine current staffing and operational policies, practices, structure and culture including input/interviews of officers and civilian staff, command staff, city employees and department heads, community leaders, community nonprofit partners, volunteers, and residents. The goal is to measure the current operations against industry best practices and standards, then make recommendations on improvements that are specific to the needs of Northglenn. The project kicked-off in January, and the final report will be released July 10. See www.northglenn.org/PDAssessment for details.

RESIDENT INPUT GUIDES CARES ACT FUNDS

The city received about $3 million of CARES Act funds from Adams County. On May 4, council brainstormed ideas for best use of the funds, and also asked residents, "What would help you, your family, or your business through the hardships caused by COVID-19?"

The city can only use the funds to cover expenses directly related to the COVID-19 pandemic. This could include things like public health, expenses related to compliance, and support of businesses that have been negatively impacted by COVID-19. The money needs to be spent by December 2020.

Resident feedback suggested funds be directed towards families/individuals in need, small businesses, and community efforts to slow the spread of COVID-19.

Some key ideas that have been or will be implemented:

- Purchase of adult and youth size masks provided to residents for free, including delivery to nursing homes and other service providers where needed
- Adding hand sanitizing stations at high-use parks
- Education campaigns on the use of masks and importance of social distancing and hand washing/sanitizing
- Elevate Small Business Grant, which has provided over $400,000 of rent/mortgage assistance to local small businesses to date
- $125,000 in mini-dining grants, which purchased 5,000 $25 gift cards from about 50 city restaurants that provided restaurants immediate aid, help to residents, and a small boost to our local economy
- $500,000 allocated for grants open to nonprofit community organizations providing services to residents such as food, housing, family, and utility assistance ▶ See story on Page 6
- Creation of a temporary Community Resource Navigator to help residents who have been impacted by COVID-19

More information on these topics are in the mayor and city manager's columns (Page 4), and the cover story. These topics will be further discussed at July council meetings and study sessions.

FIREWORKS ARE ILLEGAL IN THE CITY SO TALK TO YOUR NEIGHBOR ABOUT IT!

Fireworks are illegal in Northglenn. Contacting the police when you hear them going off in the city can feel like it is your only recourse, but sometimes it's faster (and more effective) to just talk to the people setting them off, especially if they live nearby. The problem could be solved without involving the police, and you build relationships in the neighborhood!

- Introduce yourself if you don't know your neighbor.
- Let them know you would like to chat with them a bit about fireworks use.
- Ask "Are you aware that fireworks are illegal in Northglenn?"
- Share the information about the $1,000 minimum fine; let them know there is increased police enforcement.
- Share a personal story as to why fireworks bother you/neighbors. "I know fireworks are fun for some, yet..."
- "I have pets and the noise really upsets them"
- "We have some veterans in the neighborhood and the loud noises raise their anxiety level"
- "Our older neighbors are startled by the noise and really appreciate it when we celebrate in a quieter way"
- "I am really concerned about fire and injury"
- Ask them, nicely, to please respect the law.
- If they want to explain their reasons for using fireworks, listen politely.
- Afterwards reiterate, "I know fireworks are fun for some, especially when there are no big productions this year, but I feel it's important to share with you that they really bother me and other neighbors and respectfully ask you not to set them off. I appreciate your time."

You may want to end the conversation by giving them a copy of one of the City of Northglenn flyers available at www.northglenn.org/fireworks2020.

Mayor's Memo: A Message from Mayor Meredith Leighty

George Floyd's Death Requires Action

► City, Police Department Reviewing Policies, Talking With Community

Shortly after the video of George Floyd's death went viral, I posted a message to our community on social media. I know our entire community may not be aware of the local impact of this national event, including what was in my message. So I would like to share an excerpt:

Leighty

I have read countless statements from elected officials, business owners, school district leaders and average Americans all offering their condemnation of the brutal acts that led to the death of George Floyd. As I pondered my own words of encouragement to my community, I chose instead to explain the action I plan to take in response.

As an American, a mother, an educator, a civil servant and, ultimately, as a human being, I am horrified at the racial violence that is prevalent in our country. It is wrong to stay quiet when we witness injustice, racism, prejudice and unlawful behavior. What happened to George Floyd, and so many others, was wrong and we must stand together and voice that this type of abuse will not be tolerated in our city, our state, or our country.

"This will be a collective effort and I look forward to partnering with our excellent police department. We are moving forward together – residents, police officers and staff, city staff, council members and business owners must work together to make real change. I hope you join me in this worthwhile effort."

I joined hundreds of mayors across the country by taking the pledge to address police use of force policies in our community. Developed by My Brother's Keeper Alliance, the pledge outlines specific steps that must be taken within 90 days. I am committed to action.

I pledge to:

1. REVIEW the police use of force policies in my community.
2. ENGAGE my community by including a diverse range of input, experiences, and stories in our review.
3. REPORT the findings of our review to my community and seek feedback within 90 days of signing this pledge.
4. REFORM my community's police use of force policies based on findings.

The time for action is now.

The Northglenn City Council members are having robust conversations on this topic. Chief May and I hosted a telephone town hall on this topic and we heard from many residents. There will be more opportunities this summer for residents to share their stories and thoughts with us.

This will be a collective effort and I look forward to partnering with our excellent police department. We are moving forward together – residents, police officers and staff, city staff, council members and business owners must work together to make real change. I hope you join me in this worthwhile effort.

I wish you and your loved ones a safe and happy 4th of July,

— Mayor Meredith Leighty

City Manager's Column: A Letter from Heather Geyer

City Government Positioned to Address Systemic Racism

► Race and Equity Initiative Part of Council's Strategic Plan

It's been a challenging year so far, to say the least. We continue to address COVID-19 challenges head on and find unique ways to bring services to residents. Now, in the midst of this global health pandemic and economic uncertainty, we have a tragedy that spotlights systemic racism.

Geyer

This form of racism, also referred to as institutional racism, is a form of racism expressed in the practice of social and political institutions such as government. We are positioned at the local level to stand up for what is right and to not contribute to or tolerate racism. Racial inequality and injustice is not someone else's problem, it is everyone's problem.

We have an opportunity here in Northglenn. We are in a place to have a conversation within our community about what we need to improve upon, and how we need to do better. One of the cornerstones of a high-performance organization is a continuous improvement mindset.

"Truly implementing change is more than the number of trainings we host around diversity topics – dismantling systemic racism is moving forward with a comprehensive review of policies and systems to ensure they are equitable. This is an undertaking that will require time, difficult conversations and a willingness to recognize we can do better."

The mayor, City Council and I are committed to taking our conversation about race and equity to the next level. There is a lot to learn in this space and I will work to secure the tools we need to do everything possible to be a welcoming and inclusive community.

Truly implementing change is more than the number of trainings we host around diversity topics – dismantling systemic racism is moving forward with a comprehensive review of policies and systems to ensure they are equitable. This is an undertaking that will require time, difficult conversations and a willingness to recognize we can do better.

Though there is a spotlight on this conversation due to recent events, it is not a new conversation in Northglenn.

Our community has strived to be inclusive and celebrated diversity for many years. Goals and action items related to equity were identified in the Strategic Plan over a year ago, and last fall, we joined the Government Alliance on Race and Equity (GARE). We will move forward with these goals, engage our community, and identify the steps we need to take to be part of addressing racial disparity at the local level in hope that we can contribute to the larger societal work underway to dismantle systemic racism.

I look forward to hearing from you and working with you, to ensure Northglenn is a great place to live for everyone.

— City Manager Heather Geyer

Building Something Together

► Lowe's Maintains Close Connection With Community Despite Its Large Size

Note: This is the sixth in a series of stories featuring winners from the 2019 Business Appreciation Breakfast. Go online to www.northglenn.org/bab to see videos about all the winners.

Lowe's Home Improvement, winner of the 2019 Large Business of the Year Award, may be the second-largest home improvement chain in the world, but they don't lose focus on the local community.

Some of the groups the Northglenn location partners with include:

- Habitat for Humanity
- Stand for the Silent
- Northglenn Police
- Northglenn High School sports and STEM programs

"I love being part of the community and working at the Northglenn store," said Travis Duncan, store manager.

Duncan's heart for Northglenn is rooted in his early years. He grew up in Northglenn, attended Northglenn High School and started working at the Northglenn Lowe's 16 years ago as a seasonal employee.

He has seen the home improvement business change dramatically over time. Once known for its building materials and hardware, Lowe's now claims appliances as their number one seller. They have also gained huge wins in offering brand-name tools and paints, along with increases in online business.

In addition to providing materials for the average home improvement project, commercial business customers bring in 20 percent of the store's sales. Their goal for contractors is to be in stock of the materials they need to get the job done.

The store is located on the east side of the Northglenn Marketplace, 104th Avenue and Interstate 25.

"Receiving the large business award is huge for our store because that tells us we are doing things correct for serving our community," said Duncan.

New COVID-19 Grant Program for Nonprofits

▶ Must Directly Help City Residents; July 10 Application Deadline

The city has created a grant program in response to COVID-19 to support nonprofit organizations providing services to Northglenn residents.

Northglenn was allocated just over $3 million from Adams County to use towards mitigating impacts of COVID-19 as part of the CARES Act (see story, Page 2). City Council allocated $500,000 of its share of the funding to support community organizations through a nonprofit grant program. The city can only use the funds to cover certain expenses, and believes partnering with community-based organizations will assist residents in need. If you or your family receive services from a nonprofit organization, make sure they know about this COVID-19 funding opportunity.

Organizations must use the grant funding for necessary expenditures incurred due to the COVID-19 public health emergency. They must demonstrate how their services have been impacted by COVID-19, and how the services directly benefit Northglenn residents. This is a reimbursable grant program involving federal grant funding for expenditures incurred from March 1, 2020 to Nov. 16, 2020.

Applications will be accepted from nonprofit organizations through Friday, July 10, 2020. Additional information about the grant program and the online application form are at www.northglenn.org/nonprofitcovid or by contacting the City Clerk's Office at clerk@northglenn.org.

ART MOVEMENT

Northglenn artist Jerry Jaramillo has completed his wrap murals on the utility boxes at the Northglenn & 112th Station. The work depicts different types of transportation utilized over time. The Northglenn Arts & Humanities Foundation, SCFD, the city and RTD funded the murals. To compliment the transportation theme, 2019/2020 People's Choice Award winner "Salvere," a stylized horse made of barbed wire, will be placed at the site. "Salvere" artist Jeff Best is creating a sister piece to go alongside.

The station sits north of East 112th Avenue and York Street and is part of the FasTracks N Line. Commuter rail trains are currently testing the track, which goes from downtown Denver to Thornton. For more on the station and the N Line, go to www.rtd-denver.com/fastracks/n-line.

Free Shred Event at Marketplace

Sat., Aug. 8, 8 a.m.-12 p.m., Northglenn Marketplace, Interstate 25 and 104th Ave.

For identity thieves, finding confidential documents is as good as buried treasure. With the information on those papers, criminals wreak havoc – take out credit cards, create false identities and commit other types of fraud.

Don't leave yourself vulnerable! The Police Department invites everyone in the metro area to bring personal documents to this FREE shred event. Each vehicle is limited to three garbage bags or paper boxes. Please enter the Marketplace from the south entrance off 104th Avenue.

Note: Electronics will NOT be accepted. This includes computers, cellphones and batteries. Magazines, trash and three-ring binders are also prohibited.

Sponsoring this event are Metro Denver Crime Stoppers, Horizons North Credit Union and Iron Mountain. Donations are appreciated and benefit Metro Denver Crime Stoppers.

For more information, contact Officer Jeramie Lund at jlund@northglenn.org or 303.450.8851.

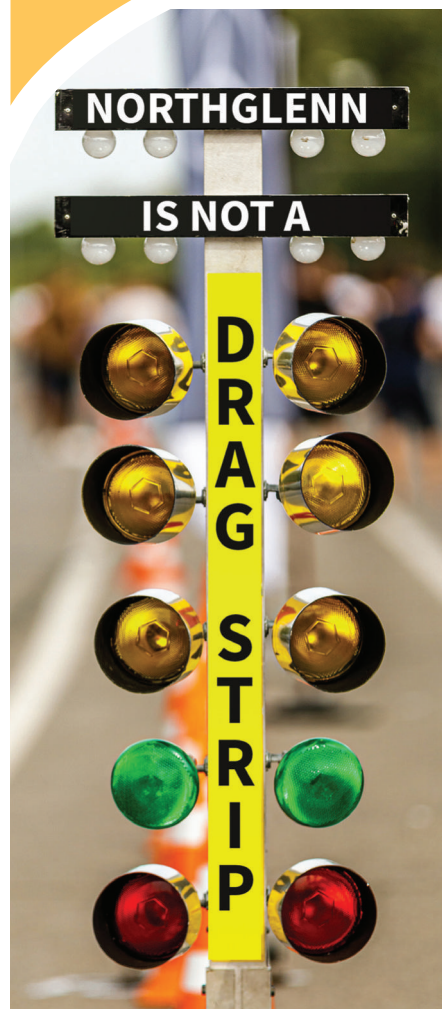

MASK UP, NORTHGLENN!

Council Member Julie Duran Mullica and her daughter hand out face masks and COVID-19 protection guidelines to city residents on June 13 at the Northglenn Marketplace.

Mullica and her daughter were joined by council members Ashley Witkovich and Katherine E. Goff, as well as city staff and police officers who helped out at the event.

The city still has face masks available for free to residents. If you would like one, stop by City Hall, 11701 Community Center Drive, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays. If you are unable to pick them up, please email the number needed and an address to communications@northglenn.org.

Call 911 If You Suspect Racing, Excessive Speeds

The Police Department has seen an increase in car meet-ups and street racing over the past several weeks.

Since racers can move quickly through multiple cities, the police have taken a multi-jurisdictional approach by working with the Colorado State Patrol and surrounding cities to discuss ways to combat the dangers street racing presents in our communities.

Although enforcement can be challenging because we need to catch racers in the act, it is not stopping police from writing tickets for illegal alterations or other actions. Things such as altered suspensions, exhaust systems and illegal lighting, as well as the squealing of tires, rapid acceleration, rapid swerving in and out of traffic or producing tire smoke from "burnouts" can earn you a ticket.

Street racing is a serious and dangerous misdemeanor traffic offense. If caught you may face a 12-point ticket and/or fine.

The public is asked to call 911 to report in-progress speeding. Let us know where you think it is happening. If you can get the description of the vehicle (or even better, the license plate number) that would help immensely.

Northglenn in Compliance With Cross-Connection Regulations

Recently, Northglenn utility customers received a notice in their utility bill regarding violations that occurred under Colorado cross-connection control regulations. This notice created a lot of confusion with residents, and our Environmental Division has received lots of questions. The Cross-Connection Control Program applies to businesses and multi-family residential (apartments and townhomes) within Northglenn. This regulation and the municipal code that goes with it are intended to protect the city's drinking water from potential contamination from business-related activities. In the simplest terms, this program requires that businesses and multi-family residential building have a backflow preventer on their main waterline. The code and state regulation also require that these backflow preventers are tested annually by a certified tester. In 2019, the city recognized 10 businesses that either did not have these devices or did not test them during the year as they are required. Because this condition occurred, the city's water system was in violation of the Colorado Safe Drinking Rules. The violation is considered a Tier 2 violation. This means that a failure of a treatment process or technique occurred in our system that had the potential to cause contamination, but no impacts to water quality occurred. Despite no impacts to our drinking water, state rules require the city to send a notice to all utility customers letting them know that this occurred. As stated in the notice, residents do not need to take any action at their home. In 2019, the city's drinking water was safe, and consistently met all state and federal drinking water regulations. As of June 2020, all of the issues that were listed in the notice were corrected, and the city's Cross-Connection Control Program is again in compliance with state regulations. For more details on the city's Cross-Connection Control Program, visit www.northglenn.org/crossconnection. For more information on the city's drinking water quality, look for the annual water quality report in your mailbox, or on www.northglenn.org/waterreport.

KEEP WASTE OUT OF THE GUTTERS!

Dumping liquid or solid waste into a storm drain or creek is a crime. That includes neighborhood gutters! If you see illegal dumping or a spill, report it to Northglenn's Neighborhood Services Division at 303.280.7876.

MAKE LIKE A
AND GROW

Our City of Northglenn two-man tree army, Jacob Burbach and Joel Szymanski, took on a new project this year – a tree nursery. Now 132 baby trees are growing near the city's Wastewater Treatment Plant (WWTP) in Weld County.

The project took advantage of soil and tree container donations, city mulch, and low-cost trees from the Adams County CSU extension. Baby catalpa, choke cherry, scotch pine, locust and more were purchased in pots then lowered into a second set of irrigated in-ground pots.

When they are ready to be planted in one of our many local parks, another tree easily takes the spot; the system provides a continuous tree supply at a reduced cost. The project only took about a week to roll out once supplies were secured. The forestry team is very appreciative the WWTP allowed the use of the space – and there is room to expand!

Though most trees will grow at the nursery for about two years before reaching a good size for park planting, the first new tree went to Malley Park in June.
