State of the City

Plenty to be Excited About

When I look back on 2016, I see years of hard work and planning leading to tangible results.

In 2014, City Council launched a strategic plan entitled "Vitalization." We wanted to bring energy and life to the city through redevelopment, civic engagement and a renewed sense of community.

Joyce Downing

Some of the goals included being ready for the arrival of FasTracks, determining what to do with our City Hall, recreation center and police station, bringing new and exciting events into the community and evaluating how we are seen and how we present ourselves to the community.

I can happily say that after two years, many of our goals have been completed – or are now ready to launch.

The city has been working simultaneously on three massive development projects at once, with real progress on all.

"We have a lot of big things planned for 2017 related to infrastructure, communications, planning and more."

The Justice Center, future home of the Police Department and Municipal Court, will break ground this spring. We expect to settle on a plan for the Civic Center – the area around City Hall and the Recreation Center – this spring as well. FasTracks has two stations along Northglenn's border, and we've partnered with Thornton to make sure we take advantage of every benefit that commuter rail has to offer.

Our events initiative launched in 2015 with Pirate Fest, and then reached new levels in 2016 with the Food Truck Carnival. We had 39,000 people attend the event – way beyond what we expected. Just wait – we'll be pulling a third new event out of our hat in 2017!

As for how we present ourselves, well, you can take a look at this copy of the Connection, with new colors, a new style and a new logo. Earlier this year, I started hosting a new city television show – Northglenn Now – so residents can learn about what their city is doing and how some organizations are making a difference in the community.

All of this is just a glimpse of what your city initiated or is working on – and the work is certainly not over.

We have a lot of big things planned for 2017 related to infrastructure, communications, planning and more. I implore you to let us know what you think – whether it's me, another council member, or City Manager Jim Hayes, who came to the city in April. Northglenn is growing and changing, and the decisions we make now will affect the city for decades to come.

This is going to be a big year for Northglenn.

– Mayor Joyce Downing

NOTICE ANYTHING DIFFERENT?

First it was in color, then it wasn't, and now the Connection is in color again. We hope you like the new look!

The Connection is an important way of staying in touch with you by sharing information about the city, so we thought color was appropriate.

The colors and design reflect the city's rebranding, which will be utilized throughout the city starting in January.

The cost of printing in color was a minimal increase; each issue of the Connection costs less than 15 cents to print, even with color.

Progress Continues on Justice Center

► Groundbreaking Set for 112th and I-25 This Spring

With the Northglenn Justice Center design nearing completion and the groundbreaking in the spring, the city would like to keep the residents updated about the progress being made while answering some questions you might have.

• Where will the center be located?

The center will be located on the vacant land overlooking Interstate 25, just south of 112th Avenue. It's scheduled to be open in late 2018/early 2019.

• What services will be provided there?

Both the Police Department and Municipal Court will move into the facility when it is finished.

• How was the need for a new Justice Center determined?

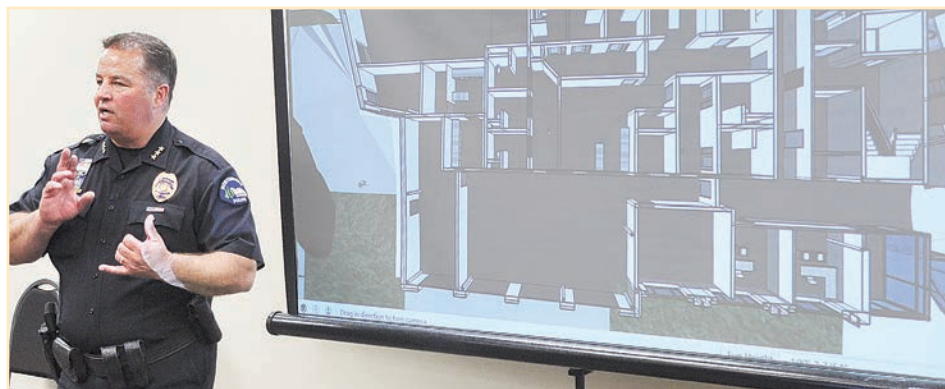

A Police Needs and Space Assessment conducted in 2014 stated that the current space was no longer functional. The building's systems need to be replaced, and the building is nearing the end of its functional life. Also, the size and configuration of the space don't meet the needs of the department, or modern police standards. Needs include areas for preparation, processing and storing of evidence, as well as booking and holding areas.

• How was the decision made to move forward?

The design contract was approved by City Council on Feb. 8, 2016. It was carefully thought out and the decision was not taken lightly. However, ultimately council felt a new Justice Center was necessary to serve the residents of the city.

• How was the location selected?

There were only two sites in the city that did not require a significant amount of property acquisition – near the current location in the Civic Center or by the water towers on 112th Avenue and Community Center Drive. The location on 112th is better for many reasons; one being it will ease traffic and safety concerns near the Civic Center.

Police Chief Jim May gives a presentation about the Northglenn Justice Center on Aug. 18, 2016, at the Maintenance & Operations Building. The entire city was invited to come learn about the Justice Center and ask any questions they may have.

• How was the information about the center communicated to residents? How was it distributed and where was it available?

The city has strived to keep residents informed about the Justice Center through all appropriate channels, and the center has been a popular topic at council meetings and other public events.

The city held a well-attended forum for residents who live near 112th Avenue and Interstate 25 in October 2015. An open house was held on Aug. 18, 2016, with every household in the city being mailed an invitation.

Information was in the Connection 12 times since 2014, and articles about the center have appeared in the Denver Post Adams County YourHub section and in the Northglenn-Thornton Sentinel. Updates have been posted on the city's social media pages and a basic fact sheet is available at northglenn.org/justicecenter.

The center has been discussed at a number of neighborhood and council meetings, which are open to the public. Agendas and related document for the meetings are on the city's website at webdocs.northglenn.org or at the City Clerk's Office.

• What is the cost of the new Justice Center?

The final cost for the entire project is estimated at $23 million.

• Why did the costs increase?

The costs changed over time because the original estimate didn't include some unknown costs, and because Denver is a competitive market where labor, materials and building costs are climbing.

• Is the building design taking away from functionality?

Not at all! The designs are beautiful, but functionality has always been the first priority. This facility will serve the needs of the city for decades.

• How much money has been spent on the Justice Center so far? And where is the money coming from?

Costs to date are approximately $750,000. The Justice Center is being funded by the city's ½ percent sales tax that is restricted to capital projects. In November 2015, Northglenn residents voted to extend this sales tax indefinitely, without a sunset clause.

An FAQ sheet is located at northglenn.org/justicecenter. If you have additional questions, please call 303-450-8713.

On the Web: Go to northglenn.org/justicecenter for more information on the project.

Comment Needed on 112th Station Area Plan

FasTracks Rail Station Set to Open in 2018

The N-Line of the RTD FasTracks commuter rail line will launch in 2018, and the cities of Northglenn and Thornton are looking for resident feedback to make sure we're ready.

The draft 112th Avenue Station Area Master Plan is available for public review online at www.northglennstation.org.

People who live, work and attend school in the area are urged to look at the draft of the plan and provide feedback, but comments from all residents and potential station users are welcome.

The plan will guide land use and transportation infrastructure in the area to make sure it supports the station while providing a vibrant, walkable and mixed-use community. The goal is to create a hub that connects the 112th station to local neighborhoods.

Over the past year, the two cities have hosted multiple public and stakeholder meetings and taken in feedback to put together this draft.

Comments will be accepted until Jan. 7, 2017.

For more information, please go to the website or contact Planning Manager Becky Smith at 303-450-8741 or development@northglenn.org.

The 112th Avenue Station Area Master Plan focuses on the ½-mile radius around the location of the station, 112th Avenue and York Street in Northglenn. This includes the area south and east of Hulstrom K-8, the northern portion of Fox Run, the Northglenn industrial area and a portion of Thornton.

On the Web: Go to www.northglennstation.org to view the plan and for more information.

Volunteers Needed

Northglenn High Offering Junior Achievement Program

Northglenn High School continues to lead the way in providing classes and programs that prepare students for college and careers.

In February, every ninth grade student will participate in the Junior Achievement Be Entrepreneurial program in their economics class, where they will learn how to start their own entrepreneurial ventures. The final project is a Shark Tank-type presentation to local business people. Junior Achievement prepares young people to thrive in the workplace by inspiring a passion in free enterprise and entrepreneurship.

Volunteers are needed! The time commitment can vary to meet your schedule. Information is provided to help you mentor and guide the students through their program. For more information contact Charlene Moser at 720-530-6369 or cmoser@jacolorado.org.

SNOW STORMERS

Looking for a way to benefit the community?

Many residents can't shovel snow from their own sidewalks. You and your employees can help by taking the Snow Stormer Business Challenge. Just sign up to clear snow for one or more city residences. The need is great and the personal reward tremendous. Shoveling can be done before, after (or perhaps during) work, whatever works for you and your business.

Your company will be honored with certificates of participation. The most committed business will even receive a golden shovel as a small token of appreciation.

For more about volunteering with Snow Stormers, contact Jenni Murphy at 303-450-8904 or jmurphy@northglenn.org.

A Fresh Look

► City Officially Unveils New Logo

The City of Northglenn is excited to introduce ... a new logo.

The new look will help set us apart from surrounding cities and communicate a sense of vitality, that Northglenn is a place where families and businesses can thrive.

While the 44-year-old logo worked well for the city for many years, it didn't quite reflect what Northglenn was becoming – a revitalized city with an eye on the future.

In 2014, City Council developed a strategic plan for the city that included marketing and branding, including the possibility of a new logo.

In 2016, a new logo was approved, one that was based on what community research told us: Northglenn residents view the city as a place to call home and that they love the parks and trees.

The new official City of Northglenn logo.

The roll out of the new logo and rebranding will take four to five years in order to accommodate budget and staff time constraints. There will be a cost, but it is a very small percentage of the city's approved budget. Because we want to be efficient, we will use up existing supplies and replace items as needed so it will be manageable.

Cities and businesses infrequently change their logo, it requires a lot of thought and commitment. This new logo should last a long time.

415 BIKES DONATED

Many volunteers gathered at the Maintenance & Operations Facility for the annual Holiday Bike Clean Up on Dec. 10. These bicycles were donated during the year through the city's bike program. Volunteers washed the 415 bikes so they were ready to be donated to families in the community. To donate an old or unused bike, please call 303-450-8904 or e-mail jmurphy@northglenn.org.
