(1) Prior to permit issuance. Proof of the total valuation of construction activity (building, alteration, structure, electrical, gas, mechanical and/or plumbing systems) for permit fee cost valuation purposes may be established by the permit applicant via submission to the Building Official of a written, signed and notarized construction contract or by the submission of an affidavit by the subject property owner supported by an attached copy of the construction contract. If there is no written construction contract, then the contractor or the owner must submit a specific description of all construction activity contemplated, all consideration to be paid therefor and the value thereof; which description shall be certified in writing under oath by both the contractor and the owner. If the permit applicant fails to make such submission, waives making such submission, requests issuance of the permit without making such submission, or otherwise fails to submit sufficient evidence of cost valuation, then the building official shall determine the total valuation of construction activity for permit fee cost valuation purposes based on his experience, his knowledge of then current market conditions, and the information contained in the submitted permit application. If, in the opinion of the building official, the claimed valuation of building, alteration, structure, electrical, gas, mechanical or plumbing systems appears to be underestimated on the application, the permit shall be denied, unless the applicant can show detailed, quantity estimates, and/or bona fide signed contracts (excluding land value) to meet the approval of the building official. For permitting purposes, valuation of buildings and systems shall be total replacement value to include structural, electric, plumbing, mechanical, interior finish, relative site work, and overhead and profit; excluding only land value and demolition. Valuation references may include the latest published data of national construction cost analysis services (Marshall-Swift, Means, etc.), as published by International Code Congress.
